

For Sinus and Allergy Relief, the Pharmacist Says 'Please Pass the Pepper'

Sinol's nasal spray relieves sinus, allergies, and even headaches fast. Pharmacists and Doctors are recommending this new all natural nasal spray. A leading retail pharmacist explains why it works.

Newtown, CT (PRWEB) September 11, 2006, -- That spicy food you just ate cleared out your sinuses and now you can breathe easier. There is a reason for this anomaly. Capsaicin, the ingredient that comes from the pepper plant has been shown in long-term studies to reduce nasal congestion, runny nose, sneezing and even chronic headaches.

The "new," all natural, Sinol Nasal Spray, made with capsaicin, has just hit the and Doctors and Pharmacists around the country are embracing this new product and you should too.

"It is an incredible product" replied April Cassidy, a registered pharmacist for one of the largest drug chains in the U.S. "I ran out of conventional options to treat my sinusitis. That year I had two sinus surgeries, and only grew worse, and was on antibiotics almost continually. My allergist didn't want me to take more antibiotics and I agreed. This spring I tried Sinol and was amazed at my results. Sinol controls all of my nasal allergy symptoms: the post nasal drip, the itching, the pressure, the sneezing, the headaches and the congestion, stated Cassidy." Sinol also has drastically reduced the symptoms of my four year old extremely antibiotic-resistant bacterial sinus infection. I am not taking my prescription steroid nasal sprays or my antihistamine/decongestant medications at all and it is the height of the worst allergy time of the year for me. Sinol is a product that I am now recommending to everyone with allergy and sinus problems."

"Since capsaicin desensitizes the mucous membranes in the nose, it makes them less irritated by airborne particles, helping to relieve allergies and congestion," said J.S. Lacroix, a researcher at University Hospital in Geneva.

"Sinol nasal spray is an all natural formula, free of artificial preservatives and it doesn't burn. It's considered by thousands of sufferers to be an important breakthrough for relieving a variety of chronic sinus, allergy and headache conditions," said Paul Carpenter, President of Sinol USA. The beauty of Sinol is it can be used on an as needed basis and it is basically a drug-free approach to sinus, allergy and headache problems", Carpenter said.

The ingredients in Sinol have powerful cleansing properties that work together with the capsaicin to clean out your nasal passages of bacteria. Sinol also reduces pain and swelling throughout the sinuses and along the "Trigeminal" nerve network which controls much of the headache pain and overall swelling that can lead to chronic congestion. Sinol also uses "Aloe Vera" to help moisturize the nasal passages leaving the user with a fresh clean feeling.

"As a pharmacist, I am also very impressed that this is an FDA registered product (the other spray I had tried was not) and that gives me even greater confidence to recommend Sinol to patients," stated Cassidy. "I have given out bottles of Sinol to my coworkers with migraines and family members with allergies and sinus problems and have heard such great reviews. I highly recommend Sinol."

Last fall an Open Label Safety Assessment was performed on the new Sinol Nasal Spray. The Assessment provided remarkable proof that Sinol is close to ninety percent effect for chronic migraines and cluster headaches, allergies and sinus problems.

Sinol Nasal Spray can be purchased at your local pharmacy or you can buy it on the web at drugstore.com, amazon.com, netrition.com and nationalallergysupply.com.
